Defining the parasol size

Note: only for Weishäupl parasols with wooden frame (Klassiker, teak, half and basic parasol)

- Is the parasol a Weishäupl parasol? (label with the Weishäupl logo on the inside of the parasol canopy)
- There are two different types of parasol struts (see sketch on Page 3)
 - tensioning struts: struts to which the covering fabric is attached ("tensions" the fabric)
 - support struts: strut connecting the tensioning strut and the parasol pole
- Is the parasol
 - round/octagonal (all tensioning struts are the same length),
 - square (two tensioning struts of different lengths), or
 - rectangular (three tensioning struts of different lengths)?
- Features that will help to identify the model of your umbrella:

Klassiker parasol:

Wire and connecting elements are silver-coloured.

Pulley blocks are made of brass.

Parasol frame is made of ash (light-coloured wood)

Teak parasol:

Wire and connecting elements are brass-coloured. (Since 2019 silver-coloured!)

Pulley blocks are made of brass.

Parasol frame is made of teak (dark-coloured wood).

Half parasol:

Like 'Klassiker,' but with a 'half' parasol canopy.

Basic parasol:

Wire and connecting elements are silver-coloured.

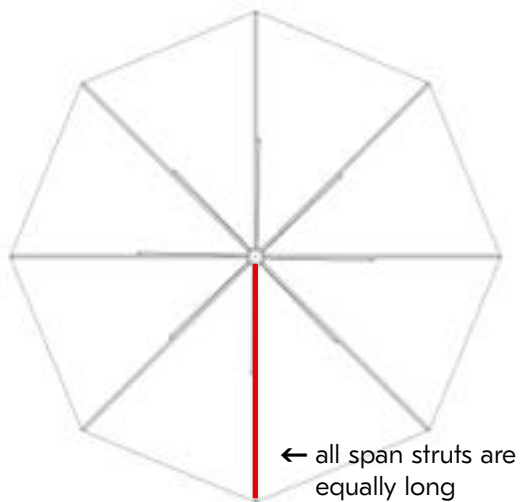

Pulley rollers are made of V2A steel

Parasol frame is made of ash (light-coloured wood).

Parasol pole has a diameter of 48 mm.

- To define the parasol size, please measure the exact length of the highlighted tensioning struts. See sketches on the following page.
